

Local Perspectives on the State of Open Data

A Love Data Week Panel Discussion

February 13, 2019
10:30am - 12:00pm

Perry-Castañeda Library
Learning Lab 1

If you love something set it free – especially if it's data! This panel discussion will feature experts from local government organizations who are involved with the management and sharing of their organization's data. The event will feature speakers from:

City of Austin

Texas General Land Office (GLO)

TNRIS (Texas Natural Resources Information Systems)

Travis County

They will discuss their respective roles and give their perspectives on what, why, and how data is shared and made available to the public. This will be a great chance to become familiar with online sources of local data and learn more about how these datasets can be used in research, map design, and application development.
